Sorry this is late, but because it is, I include some notes about the department meeting in October. I also apologize for the lack of little blurbs this time around, but this feels like a rush job this time. So, as they use to say in Marvel Comics, "Nuff said!"

Lessons Your Confederate Brother-in-Law Should Learn!

Lesson #4 – Good Men Fight For Evil Causes - Unfortunately

The war was about State's Rights (probably part one of this argument)

Lee thought slavery was "a moral and political evil." In a December 27, 1856 letter he writes:

There are few, I believe, in this enlightened age, who will not acknowledge that slavery as an institution is a moral and political evil. It is idle to expatiate on its disadvantages. I think it is a greater evil to the white than to the colored race. While my feelings are strongly enlisted in behalf of the latter, my sympathies are more deeply engaged for the former. The blacks are immeasurably better off here than in Africa, morally, physically, and socially. The painful discipline they are undergoing is necessary for their further instruction as a race, and will prepare them, I hope, for better things. How long their servitude may be necessary is known and ordered by a merciful Providence. Their emancipation will sooner result from the mild and melting influences of Christianity than from the storm and tempest of fiery controversy... While we see the course of the final abolition of human slavery is still onward, and give it the aid of our prayers, let us leave the progress as well as the results in the hands of Him who, chooses to work by slow influences, and with whom a thousand years are but as a single day.

This means the greatest General of the South, at least when it came to African-Americans, knew slavery was evil, but until some divine messenger arrived on the scene and said it was a no-no, he was comfortable with it. He was willing to accept "slow influences" to change slavery, but any northern notion of ending it was just wrong. When it came time to choose to fight for the North or South, he chose his home state Virginia because of the notion "My State, Right or Wrong!" If you want to argue states rights, go ahead. If you are claiming then that was the only cause to the war, what was the chief state right being defended? If you mention states' rights and tariffs, you also must accept that slavery was an issue. While I may not be able to persuade you that slavery was the overarching socio-economic, political issue, you cannot deny it was a big issue on the minds of all the leaders because they mention it in their articles of secession! The leaders, Lee included, knew slavery was either the cause or a big cause.

Yes, he knew it was wrong and still fought for a cause that supported a moral and political evil. Can a good man truly be a good man if he knowingly accepts an evil and defends that evil? If you were a simple country boy and didn't know the reason your leaders were fighting, you can say yes to that last question (as I can, because all men are sinners, born in sin). But then you are also required to accept the fact that the majority of Germans were good people and even that possibly a large number of Nazis were good people. The good Germans (simpletons for the sake of argument) didn't know about the Jews. Many Nazis didn't. So they fought for "My Country, Right or Wrong!"

Simply put, good men fight for evil causes. Slavery was an evil cause that was at least in part a cause of the Civil War. We all have to live with the sins of our ancestors. All our ancestors have sinned! No, exceptions! So what makes a truly Great Man? One who once the evil is recognized, takes the action to correct his previous errors and then does everything in his power to defeat that evil. We need look no further than Lee's opponent who freed his one slave prior to the war and later apologized for his improper treatment of Jewish merchants when that was brought to his attention. Yes, Grant was a great man!

Friendly Fire, as reported by Doug Harding, NPS from Missouri Republican, 31 May 1861

The Facts in regard to the Death of Captain Blendowski – He was Shot by a Minie Ball – It will be remembered that in noting the death of Capt. Blandowski a few days since, we stated that the wound which he received at Camp Jackson, and which resulted in his death, was caused by a Minie rifle ball. The statement was not generally believed, but the following certificate from Dr. T.G. Comstock, Physician to the Good Samaritan Hospital, in which Capt. Blandowski died, sets the matter at rest:

ST. LOUIS, May 26, 1861

I certify that Capt. Constantine Blandowski died on the 16th of May, 1861, in this city, from the consequences of a gunshot wound, inflicted at camp Jackson, on the 10th of May inst., by a Minie rifle ball, causing an injury of the head of the tibula and tibia.

T.G. COMSTOCK, M.D.

Physician to the Good Samaritan Hospital

Thus it will be seen that Capt. Blandowski was shot by his own men, although the Democrat, in its account of the affair, stated that the troops did not fire until after Capt. B. had been shot in the leg by some one in the crowd, and that after he had been this shot, he gave the command to fire. Because we did not give the same statement, we were, some time afterwards accused of falsifying the facts in our report of the affair. The testimony at the Cornor's inquest, and the above certificate, tends to verify the truthfulness of our report of the affair, and to show also that the provocation was wholly insufficient to justify the troops in firing, and thereby sacrificing so many innocent lives.

CAMPS ROLL CALL

Mooney's Bridge Memorial Stone

Members of the General Thomas C. Fletcher Camp 47, have been working all year on a special project related to Price's Raid. After the Battle of Pilot Knob, Confederate troops entered DeSoto on Sept. 30, 1864, and destroyed the water tanks along the railroad. They helped themselves to town supplies and proceeded north of town to the railroad trestle over Joachim Creek known as Mooney's Bridge. The bridge was destroyed. Several days later a train coming from St. Louis brought the 138th Illinois Infantry to repair the bridge.

They built a small fort and trench lines around the bridge, cut timber from the surrounding hillsides and began repair. The earthworks are referred to as Camp Goodwin. These earthworks are believed to be the only remaining Civil War fortifications in Jefferson County. By October 7, all repairs had been finished and the first train crossed the bridge heading south. The repair of this bridge opened the Iron Mountain Railroad for another 19 miles south.

On Saturday, November 1, 2014, the members of the General Thomas C. Fletcher Camp will dedicate a memorial stone, marking the 150th anniversary of this event. We are looking for SUV members who would like to participate. There will be a reception after the dedication. If you would like to be involved in this event, please contact Commander Doug Roussin (636-586-4263) or Leonard Wright (314-853-7255).

We have had a couple of meetings since our last newsletter. At our July meeting we discussed the battles that happened in July 1864. It was pretty interesting with the descriptions of the different battles. In August Brother Gary Scheel gave a presentation on the Battle of Pilot Knob and several guests were present. In September we Tom Greminger and Gary Scheel gave a presentation on how the National Organization of the Sons of Union Veterans is set up and how it works to the best of their ability.

Bob Hammack reported that he had participated as chaplain at the Moore's Mill Mass Grave Ceremony on July 27th. It was attended by several members of the Department of Missouri and the Department of Iowa.

On July 4th Private Robert Mueller organized Ste. Genevieve's first, in a long time, 4th of July Ceremony. We had three members of Company F present in uniform.

Company F along with the French Colonial Militia met at the public parking lot and marched the three blocks to the Courthouse wear the ceremony took place. Present were representatives of the VFW who were the flag honor guard. We listened to several speeches and the crowd enjoyed the ceremonies. Thank you Private Mueller for your efforts and reinstituting the 4th of July Ceremony in Ste. Genevieve.

The Ste. Genevieve Courthouse was used by several Union Regiments during the Civil War as a barracks and headquarters.

Westport Camp #64 Report

Battle of Lone Jack – August 15 - 16, 1862

The Battle of Lone Jack on August 15-16, 1862 in Jackson Co, Mo.,was a victory for the Confederacy in the early stages of the Civil War. The Confederate allied Missouri State Guard was recruiting throughout rural central and western Missouri in the summer of 1862, and was left largely unchallenged by Union forces. In a bold move, they launched a successful surprise attack to capture Independence, Missouri days before the Battle of Lone Jack. This loss prompted the Union to order General Totten to concentrate a 3,000 man Union force to recapture Independence.

In route, Union Major Foster with an 800 man force met a reported Confederate 1,600 man Confederate force under Colonel Coffee stationed at Lone Jack. Rather than wait for reinforcements, Major Foster led a successful surprise attack on the morning of August 15th against what was actually an 800-man garrison. The Confederate garrison was dispersed from Lone Jack, but the Union's use of cannon fire alerted an advancing Confederate force.

The next morning, Confederate Colonels Cockrell, Thompson, and Hays with a combined 3,000 man force reprised with a well-planned but poorly coordinated attack on Major Foster's men. Five hours of fighting on August 16th forced the Union to withdraw and returned Lone Jack to the Confederacy and Colonel Coffee's garrison. The victory was short lived as weeks later Confederate forces withdrew leaving Jackson County under Union control for the balance of the Civil War.

Battle of Westport - October 23, 1684

The Battle of Westport, also called the Gettysburg of the West, was fought on October 23, 1864 and represents one of the largest battles west of the Mississippi River. It was also a turning point in the war and closing chapter to Confederate General Price's 1864 Missouri raid. 30,000 soldiers were part of the engagement with 3,000 casualties. The Battle was the last major operation Confederate forces launched in the Trans-Mississippi Theater.

General Price's 1864 raid into Missouri was a bold attempt by Confederate forces to attack a Northern State; capture St. Louis; and disrupt Lincoln's re-election campaign. Price started with 20,000 troops in his Army of Missouri, but at each encounter, he met Union resistance, compelling Price to eventually shift his target to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. Reaching Westport casualties, disease, and desertion left the Confederates with an army of 8,500, confronting merging Union forces from Missouri and Kansas that totaled 22,000. Although Price had moderate success against Union forces just days prior at the Battle of Little Blue and Battle of Blue River, and Price held the better position overlooking Brush Creek, the Union troops outnumbered and overwhelmed the Confederates. Both sides reported 1,500 casualties but Price's army was forced to retreat and head for the safety of Confederate controlled Arkansas.

Battle of Westport Commemoration - October 23, 2014

Westport Camp along with Kansas' Franklin Camp is commemorating the Battle of Westport sesquicentennial with a service at Kansas City's Loose Park, the location of much of the battlefield. A meet and greet starts at 5:30 pm, with the formal service starting at 6:00 pm, Thursday evening, October 23, 2014 at the south end of Loose Park, 5200 Wornall Road, Kansas City, Missouri. Battle of Island Mound – October 29, 1862

Long before the Emancipation Proclamation, Captain Ward had organized freed slaves from Missouri and Arkansas into the 1st Kansas Colored Volunteers Infantry. In August 1862, the 1st Kansas had not yet been accepted into federal service but was ordered to Bates County, Missouri with the 5th Kansas Cavalry to patrol for Confederate guerilla forces. In an unexpected encounter, 250 Union and 350 Confederate soldiers clashed on October 29, 2012 in a skirmish until the Confederates were forced to withdraw.

Historians agree the battle had little military significance, neither side gained territory or advantage over the other. However, it was an historic moment and first occurrence in the Civil War of African-American soldiers in combat. The Confederate government was outraged at the sight of former slaves taking arms against the south. The Union Army recognized the military effectiveness of the troops and ordered the 1st Kansas into federal service. They were reorganized two years later as the 79th United States Colored Troops.

The Missouri Division of State Parks operates the Battle of Island Mound State Historic Site and has recently produced a video about the battle. It is not currently for sale, but is shown at select state parks and historic sites throughout the state.
